Dear Chairman Powell,

Federal Communications Commission
Office of the Secretary

As an avid reader of newspapers and dedicated listener to radio, I beg you not to change the FCC rules which now prohibit monopolies of the press and public information carriers. We deserve the right to diversity, to point of view, and to the depth that is only possible when a number of carriers distribute information and entertainment matter to the masses.

In a time when large corporations are gobbling up our individual differences, and forcing us into a mold, we need the competition and the creative angles that are only possible when smaller businesses can handle journalistic and other information.

Again, I beg you to vote against changing the law that now protects us from the mega corporations that would love the money and the chance to manipulate our minds.

Thank you,

Glenda J. McDonald
